About the Conference

The nature of knowledge has changed from narrow specializations to inter/multi/trans-disciplinarily because not too long we would have avoided mutual dependence and multiple causations. Primarily, the job of higher education is to generate new knowledge and provide fresh perspectives to the existing phenomenon by investigating into systematic inquires and collaborations. The last two decades have presented unprecedented change in the quality of life due to the advent of technology, no matter who the person is, his life is being daily shaped by Artificial Intelligence and Bio-technology.

In such a pertinent context, it is inevitably wise to look at how multiple disciplines could engage in meaningful clusters and work on a problem to render some kind of plausible solutions. It is this interface of various domains of knowledge from history to computer science, from art to management and from engineering to journalism that the conference aims to unfold.
